FOCAL POINTS

Readers of FOCUS surely don't need a lesson on the value of a liberal arts education. But maybe it isn't bad to offer a few examples of just how valuable the kind of education for which Maryville College is renowned can be. This issue of FOCUS does that.

Let me confess that I am completely biased about the liberal arts. Not only does my paycheck bear the logo of a liberal arts college, but all the diplomas in my family, mine included, bear seals of liberal arts colleges. In fact, I may be unique in having signed and bestowed all four of those diplomas myself, starting with my wife's. Two of our three children are Maryville College alumni, so Rachel and I are quick to give testimony about the quality of the liberal arts curriculum as designed for students here.

While FOCUS readers share our enthusiasm for Maryville's kind of education, there is widespread misunderstanding of it in the general public. When speaking to civic clubs and other groups, I take advantage of the occasion to underscore the educational goals of our kind of college, where the fundamental aim is to produce graduates who are prepared for lives of citizenship, leadership and service. Maryville College has been doing that for 181 years now. And the liberal arts education it offers is, in my view, more valuable now than ever. In a world where the principal constant is rapid change, Maryville's 21st century graduates will find that their greatest survival skill is flexibility. A liberal arts education develops key skills that equip graduates to adapt to the shifting circumstances of life and career that they are sure to encounter. These include the ability to:

- think effectively
- communicate effectively
- make discriminating judgments
- see connections
- be quantitatively conversant
- make a commitment to lifelong learning

Cowan's account of the general education curriculum, how it came into being and what its faculty architects intended it to accomplish.

The variety of careers open to graduates of liberal arts colleges is illustrated by the alumni who are highlighted in this issue of FOCUS.

Dan Greaser '60 enjoyed a successful career as an executive with Eveready.

Andy Ruhlin '68 began 3 By 4 Inc., a creative services firm in 1987. (You may recall his work from the video that was shown at Founder's Day and Homecoming.) DeAnn Hargis-Kaminski '88 has responsibility for overseas initiatives of Lucent Technologies. Amy Lee '95 is a physical therapist at the Alaska Native Medical Center. Wherever they are and whatever their choice of careers, these alumni and many, many others are making daily use of their Maryville liberal arts education.

You will find as an insert into this issue of FOCUS my seasonal letter reporting on progress at the College during this last year of the MC2000 period and announcing the creation of a new MC Window of Opportunity Plan. Be assured that, whatever the list of MC2000 accomplishments, and however ambitious the Window of Opportunity Plan, Maryville remains true to its mission. Here at this 181-year-old church-related college, gratified by recent progress and looking to an even brighter future, we are as committed to the value of the liberal arts as any college I know.

President Gerald Gibson, pictured here with his wife Rachel and their three children, has signed diplomas from liberal arts colleges for each member of his family.

Undergirding all of this is a broad base of knowledge that equips one to see personal experiences in context, make informed decisions, converse intelligently, and escape provincialism. Add to this foundation education in depth in a major, an area of special interest, and you have a graduate that is ready to take on and make a difference in the world.

At Maryville College leadership responsibility for the curricular delivery of the liberal arts core belongs to our Director of General Education, Dr. Peggy Cowan. She works with division heads to assure that the courses needed to accomplish Maryville's educational goals are in place. In the article by Karen Beaty '94 you will get Dr.

ABOUT THE COVER

On college campuses everywhere, stately columns are traditional icons of higher learning, and these gracing Thow Hall are no exception. Imposed over the columns are campus photographs depicting the many aspects of a liberal arts education.

Liberal Arts:

Preparation for a Life More Abundant

By Karen E. Beaty '94 Director of News and Sports Information

Whenever she is asked about the value of a liberal arts degree, Dr. Peggy Cowan smiles.

A graduate of a liberal arts college herself and the mother of two sons who received a similar education, Cowan knows exactly what a liberal arts education is worth. And her smile is the outward sign of an inner belief in the life-changing power curricula like the Maryville College general education curriculum have.

"The more you know, the more you can appreciate diversity and variety," she says. "It's as if having the vocabulary to name things allows you to see things you never were able to see before."

Cowan, who holds the Ralph W. Beeson Chair in Religion and coordinates Maryville College's general education curriculum, recounts an instance when her sons, home from college and on break, were having a conversation at the dinner table and disagreed on the meaning of a word. Almost immediately, they excused themselves from the table to consult a dictionary.

"In liberal arts students and graduates, there is a real sense of curiosity, I think," she explains, "There's an eagerness to know and understand."

The discussion turns to references made in movies, books and newspapers that other people may miss but liberal arts graduates may "get" because of an educational foundation that spans disciplines, history, religion, fine arts, mathematics, literature and science.

Cowan explains that her own alma mater, Randolph-Macon Women's College celebrates the motto "Vita Abundantior," which means "the Life More Abundant."

"It seems to me that ["life more abundant"] is what liberal arts has to offer," she says, "It means experiencing life in all of its richness and different dimensions."

Gen Ed 101: The shaping of the educated person.

It's not a matter of pleated pants or blue jeans, T-shirts or starched shirts, book bags or backpacks, not even contact lenses or eyeglasses.

Dr. Peggy Cowan is mindful of those images when she asks the question: "What does a liberal arts graduate look like?"

That's why she follows up the term "look like" with other questions.

"What are the characteristics of an educated person?"

"Where do we want our graduates to be – intellectually, spiritually, socially – when they graduate?"

Cowan and other faculty members began with these questions six years ago, when a curriculum task force was charged with reviewing the general education courses (those courses and projects required of all undergraduates) of the College. Asking the questions were a way to "get back to the basics," Cowan said, and a way to safeguard the process from status-quo thinking.

Revisions to the curriculum take place, on average, every 15 to 20 years, Cowan said. While the last major curriculum change had occurred in the late 1980s and the College was due for a revision, the strategic planning process of the mid 1990s and the goals for a "distinctive and stimulating liberal arts curriculum" as outlined in the MC2000 Plan further motivated faculty, staff and students to take a closer examination of general education at Maryville College.

"The theme that showed up over and over again was the ability to think critically," Cowan said. "But we were also careful to go beyond just critical thinking; We wanted the general education curriculum to have elements of personal growth, a sense of values and the idea of vocation."

The general education coordinator said campus constituents distilled their answers into five categories, each with several distinct goals: Inquiry, skills, personal growth, intercultural understanding and values; and nine "distinctive features" of the curriculum.

Printed in the front pages of the current Maryville College catalog are these words: "The Maryville Curriculum, a program of general education, is based on the conviction that liberal learning is the best preparation for a satisfying and successful life, whatever one's vocation. While many aspects of the college experience, including major-field requirements, allow students to prepare for a variety of careers and professions, general education emphasizes the cultivation of those intellectual and personal qualities that mark the educated person. Through the enhancement of skills and knowledge, the deepening of sensitivities, and the clarification of personal purpose, students learn to deal responsibly with a world of uncertainty and accelerating change."

A few distinctive features of the curriculum include an "integrated and sequenced set of freshman courses," a "range of coursework that provides grounding in the various modes of inquiry, service learning and in all aspects of the liberal arts," a "strong global and cross-cultural dimension," and "attention to values and ethical decision-making throughout the curriculum, with a capstone course focusing on these matters in January of the senior year."

Agreeing on the purposes of the Maryville College curriculum, members of the Curriculum Task Force then asked another question: "What are the courses that are going to enable us to [produce these kinds of students]?"

From drawing boards to chalk boards

The core curriculum, as the general education curriculum is also called, was implemented in the fall of 1996, and the Class of 2000 was the first group of students to complete the 60 credit hours required for graduation.

What changed from the curriculum of the 1980s to the current one, Cowan said, was "a whole bunch and not a lot."

Faculty agreed that some requirements and expectations of the older curriculum were meeting the objectives and did not need major revision, she said. Citing the general education requirement for composition, Cowan said students were still required to take two semesters of grammar, proper sentence construction and written argumentation (as in the curriculum of the 1980s), but one major change to the second-semester course was the addition of a speaking component.

"One of the things we heard from alumni was that they lacked strong speaking skills," Cowan said, "so we added that in the Composition 120 course."

The freshman seminar sequence was a "clear innovation," she said.

Today, freshmen are required to take a one-credit Orientation course, in which college policies, campus life, and Maryville College history and traditions are introduced, as well as issues surrounding wellness. Mountain Challenge experiences – ropes courses, hikes to teach the use of map and compass, canoeing, etc. – are still a part of the freshman Orientation course.

But what is different about the freshman-year experience are the "perspectives." Namely, two- and three-credit-hour courses "Perspectives on the Individual" (Freshman Seminar 120), "Perspectives on the Environment" (Freshman Seminar 130) and "Perspectives on the American Community" (Freshman Research Seminar 140).

During the curriculum review process, faculty members agreed that the basic questions of "Who am I?" and "Who am I in relation to my country and my world?" needed to be answered before posing questions of major area of study and vocation. So they designed a sequence of courses to answer those questions, while also stressing research skills, analytical reading, critical thinking and effective communication.

"Perspectives on the Environment," taught during the three-week January term, offers every student the option of taking an in-depth look at solid waste, water, forestry or energy. The requirement was born as a result of a "Save the Earth" January term course taught by David Reed Powell '66 in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

"What we heard from students and other members of the task force was that everyone should be required to take Dave Powell's environmental course," Cowan explained. "Well, of course, not everyone could do that. So, this [Freshman Seminar 130 course] is what was proposed."

Requirements for statistics, fine arts and foreign language changed very little, if at all. Adjustments were made in the areas of Biblical studies and western civilization, but the overall purpose of the courses did not change. Instead of studying strictly American institutions in Social Science 220 as students did under the 1980s curriculum, Social Science 260 sheds light on the social order of the globe.

The curriculum revision of 1967 first brought non-Western studies to the Maryville College curriculum. Cowan said the 1995 revision "continued and pushed forward" the emphasis on global and cross-cultural issues.

"We did this with the recognition that our students live in a world that is interdependent and multicultural," she said. "There are no national economies anymore. You can't solve environmental problems on a local level.

"This curriculum revision reflects the realities our students will have to face," she said.

Putting it all together

As listed in the current catalog, the last distinctive feature of the Maryville College curriculum is this: "A curricular structure with integrated freshman and senior experiences that provide coherence along with solid beginnings and a clear culmination to the liberal arts experience."

These "capstone courses" pull together issues introduced in the freshman year, experiences with community service or volunteer programs throughout the college experience and knowledge gained in major and general education courses.

"Philosophical and Theological Foundations of Ethical Thought" (Ethics 490) took the place of the earlier curriculum's Humanities 390 course. The current course examines the philosophical and theoretical foundations of ethics and how they "play out in the concrete realities of life," Cowan explained.

"While we discuss some 'hot button' issues like euthanasia and abortion, we also discuss the ethics involved in vocation – what one does with one's work – and the environment and other areas.

"We make ethical decisions every day," she continued. "[Ethics] aren't something we apply only to a life crisis."

Another capstone course that is included in the core curriculum is Senior Seminar 480. Course descriptions indicate that the Senior Seminar "provides the student with the skills and opportunity to integrate across at least two of the three modes of inquiry: scientific, artistic, humanistic."

"With the Senior Seminar, we are able to provide a capstone experience for students that is interdisciplinary," Cowan said. "The topic must span not only disciplines, but academic divisions."

Examples of the seven Senior Seminars offered during a year include "The Worth of Work: Labor and Human Vocation in Economics and Literature," "Finding Fibonacci: Exploring the Connections between Mathematics, History, Art, Music, Literature, Nature and Economics" and "Death, Mourning and Madness" (a study of religion and psychology).

While the reading, presentation and research requirements for the Senior Seminar are demanding for students, Cowan said the preparation of faculty is equally rigorous. For his Senior Seminar course "Issues in Native North America," Dr. Carl Gombert, an associate professor of art who has studied Native American art extensively, has had to delve into issues like indigenous sovereignty, reservation conditions, casino gambling, racist stereotypes and the use of sports team mascots with Native American figures.

"For the Senior Seminar, our faculty members are having to push themselves and go outside their areas of expertise," Cowan said. "They really get the opportunity to model life-long learning, which is also what the liberal arts teaches.

"It's a great learning experience for our teachers," she continued. "And it's great fun."

Cultures and countercultures

The cultures of communities, countries, religions and places in time are covered throughout Maryville College's curriculum – from the Freshman Research Seminar 140 to Biblical Studies 140 to Western Civilization 390 to World Cultures 350.

What does not show up on course syllabi – but what is apparent to several faculty members – is the liberal arts culture at Maryville College. According to Cowan, the liberal arts education is valued at Maryville, and faculty members believe in its ability to produce responsible citizens who understand complex issues and are able to make meaningful contributions to society.

“Our general education curriculum is very much a part of the hiring process,” Cowan said, explaining that job postings and advertisements for teaching positions make it clear that successful candidates will be teaching core courses in addition to major courses.

“Division chairs and senior faculty members are heavily invested in our general education curriculum,” Cowan said. “This runs counter to the culture of a university, where professors are encouraged to focus on their disciplines and majors, and general education is often left to teaching assistants or junior faculty.”

What also runs counter to larger colleges and universities that are not committed to the liberal arts is the sense of community and a willingness to share information and ideas across academic divisions.

“There’s a sense that [faculty members] are in this together,” Cowan said. “We realize that our success is dependent on each other.”

Cowan is aware that success is difficult to measure when it comes to the current general education curriculum. Only one class (the Class of 2000) has completed the curriculum. She said she hopes alumni surveys conducted in the future will give her and other faculty members quantifiable data to consider when the next revision is planned.

“They may not appreciate it right away,” Cowan said of recent graduates’ understanding of the need to study the fine arts or write a senior thesis, “but I think we’re planting seeds here. Education doesn’t stop when you graduate, and I think graduates will be able to, down the road, integrate all of these elements of their education.”

Profiles in Success

Amy Lee, Class of 1995

What is your current job?

Physical therapist at Alaska Native Medical Center in Anchorage, Alaska.

What was your major at Maryville College?

Biology

How does your major relate to what you are now doing, or does it?

It provided all the prerequisites needed to apply for physical therapy school.

How did your overall Maryville College liberal arts education prepare you for your current position?

My liberal arts education prepared me for my profession as a physical therapist by giving me experience in teamwork, creativity, organization, communication skills, time management, and research to name a few. It also made me extremely well rounded and open to new ideas and thoughts.

What education or special training followed your Maryville College education:

I attended Duke University and received a master of science degree with a certificate in physical therapy.

What advice would you give a student just starting at Maryville College:

Give it all you’ve got. Get involved in a variety of activities on campus, don’t be afraid to jump out of your comfort zone. Study hard, play hard. Don’t worry too much if you don’t know “what you want to be when you grow up” because the education and experiences you receive from Maryville will provide an excellent foundation from which to decide what that (your career) will be. It’s okay to change your mind. Have fun in college, you’ll remember it the rest of your life.

DeAnn Hargis-Kaminski, Class of 1988

What is your current job?

Title: Director Lucent World Wide Services. What does that mean: I am responsible for ensuring that Lucent’s Services organizations are prepared to deploy all the telecommunications equipment that we make. By “deploy”

I mean physically and logically engineer, install and integrate new equipment into the public telephone network.

What was your major at Maryville College:

Computer Science/Business with a minor in Accounting

How does your major relate to what you are now doing, or does it?

My major was absolutely the selling factor for my first few jobs within AT&T (Lucent was spun-off from AT&T in 1996) - I was responsible for developing processes and systems requirements for the ordering and shipping of equipment from US based factories to all international regions.

Based on my experiences there, I was able to leverage understanding the processes required to build telecom networks with my Business background (and MBA in International Business) into the development of new business opportunities for Lucent services.

How did your overall MC liberal arts education prepare you for your current position?

The liberal arts education forced me to think and write . . . sounds pretty simplistic, but the skills I learned through those liberal arts classes were to look at a situation from multiple angles and be able to convey my thoughts in written word. This is severely lacking in a number of young people entering the work force.

What education or special training followed your MC education?

I earned an MBA in International Business from Fairleigh Dickinson University (NJ) and I took a Dale Carnegie course in effective speaking.

What advice would you give a student just starting at MC:

Learn how to write such that you can convey your thoughts in clear and concise emails (or letters) and be able to take an assignment, see beyond the obvious, and do whatever it takes to complete the task - doing only what it takes to get by is a bad habit to form and very hard to break.

Andy Ruhlin, Class of '68

What is your current job?

I am the President/Creative Director of 3 By 4, Inc. - a creative services company I started in 1987. In addition to the administrative and managerial tasks that are involved in running a business, I spend most of my time managing the creation of video, videowall and multimedia projects for our clients. 3 By 4 is a small company that serves the communications needs of large-to-medium-sized corporations and various not-for-profit institutions (colleges, universities, museums, social service agencies and arts organizations).

What was your major at Maryville College?

"All of the above" might be the most appropriate answer! I started out as a Psychology major, switched to Political Science and ultimately graduated with a major in Art. I probably took enough courses in the English Department to qualify for a minor in that discipline.

How does your major relate to what you are now doing, or does it?

The Art major provided an excellent foundation in the aesthetic principles I use everyday. I learned the fundamentals of good design at Maryville, which have been essential to my work in a visual medium. As an Art major, I was constantly confronted with the creative challenge, with the "empty canvas." I learned how to use the tools and techniques available to express myself and to make a statement (not always successfully, I would add!). Though the tools and techniques I now use have changed considerably since my days in MC's studios, the discipline I developed there has been crucial to what I do. As a television writer, producer, director, editor, I still face the "empty canvas" and the challenge of using space (and time) to communicate.

My English courses and especially the exposure to great literature not only taught me how to write, but more importantly, how to tell a story effectively.

Finally, I'd say that my theatre experiences at MC, both onstage and offstage, contributed tremendously to what I do now. As a director, I'm frequently working with actors and blocking scenes. But more importantly, I'm always dealing with the essence of good drama, whether it be fictional or factual. The "plays" I create and the players I incorporate must be arranged and paced according to many of the same guidelines that I learned on Maryville's stage.

How did your overall MC liberal arts education prepare you for your current position?

In light of the wide variety of content and messages I deal with, I think every aspect of my liberal arts education relates to what I'm doing now. In particular, I think the emphasis placed on writing and composition has proven to be extremely useful. Another valuable gift from the liberal arts experience is an appreciation for the "connectedness" of things. MC's broad-based curriculum provided me with a perspective that I would've missed if I'd begun to focus too quickly on one particular subject or discipline.

What education or special training followed your MC education?

- graduate assistantship in Theater at UT-Knoxville
- Masters degree in TV/Film from Syracuse University (Newhouse School of Communications)

Advice to new students:

- sample lots of courses in different areas
- recognize that the extra-curricular aspects of your education are as valuable as the curricular components, so make the most of these opportunities
- "disconnect" from your Mac or your PC long enough to connect with other students and teachers; the deepest friendships of my life were formed at Maryville College, which are unquestionably the most enduring and most important "take-away" from that four-year experience
- go hiking in the Smokies! It's a treasure you don't want to overlook.

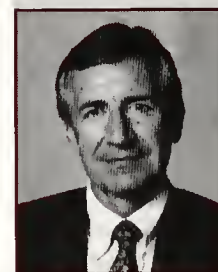

Sheridan "Dan" Greaser, Class of 1960

What is your current job?

Retired-General Manager-Operations, Global Lighting Products, Eveready Battery Company, Inc. Prior executive positions as Director of Operations-Europe, Director of Operations-Asia/Pacific and Managing Director, Eveready Singapore.

What was your major at Maryville College?

Chemistry

How does your major relate to what you are now doing, or does it?

Provided a basic understanding of the natural sciences and an analytical approach to problem solving. It served me well during career stints as Director of Technology and Assistant Plant Manager-Engineering.

How did your overall MC liberal arts education prepare you for your Current position?

It gave broad exposure to varied disciplines which helped understanding of a wide spectrum of issues. World religion courses, for example, helped in understanding foreign cultures during off-shore assignments in Europe and Asia. Communication skills were very important.

Maryville College's core curriculum and student involvement opportunities were key in developing confidence and proficiency in this important area. Learning French was much easier after having Spanish in high school and German in college.

What education or special training followed your MC education?

Management of Managers Program-University of Michigan (1974), Executive Development Program-Ohio State University (1978-79) (Sent to both by the parent company of Eveready at that time, Union Carbide Corporation). Also graduated from the Air Command and General Staff College (while in the Air National Guard)

What advice would you give a student just starting at MC?

The campus is a classroom. Learn broadly. Every class that you take and every activity in which you participate at MC will be a part of your experience base in the future. Get to know everyone, fellow students, faculty, and staff. They will be your best friends and special support network for the rest of your life.

Think of your days at Maryville as a stepping stone. Education is a lifelong process, and Maryville is your good foundation of higher learning. Above all, enjoy the experience.

Dr. Arthur S. Bushing Awarded the Maryville College Medallion

Each year at its Founder's Day Celebration in October, the administration of Maryville College awards the Maryville College Medallion, the highest honor bestowed by the College. On October 12 Dr. Arthur S. Bushing '43, received the award in a ceremony held on campus.

A 1943 graduate of Maryville College, Bushing also served on the faculty for nearly 50 years. He is married to the former Dorothy Barber, who graduated from the College in 1942. Born in Oroville, Washington, Bushing attended high school at the Alvin C. York Agricultural Institute in Jamestown, Tennessee. While at Maryville College, he majored in English with a minor in mathematics and physics. Upon graduation in 1943, Maryville College hired him as an instructor of physics, a job that was interrupted by a call to active duty in the U.S. Army during World War II. He spent three years in the Army, serving 17 months in the European Theater. For his service, he received the Bronze Star in addition to the Battle of the Rhineland and the Battle of Central Europe medals.

In 1944 he enrolled in Army Specialized Training at Stanford University and in the summer of 1945, he studied French language and civilization at the Sorbonne, University of Paris.

Upon his return to Tennessee, Bushing entered the University of Tennessee, serving as a graduate assistant in the English department while pursuing his master's degree, which he completed in 1948. In 1947, he joined the faculty at Maryville College as assistant professor of English. For the next 49 years, he served the College continuously, with the exception of a two-year leave of absence to teach English at UT, during which time he completed coursework in the doctoral program. During summers, he continued to pursue educational opportunities, taking graduate courses at the University of Iowa. Throughout the years, he also received numerous grants for research and writing, including the Mellon Grant for Research and Writing. He was also named a Ford Foundation Fellow in Asian Studies at the University of Chattanooga Consortium. In 1952, after completing his leave of absence, Bushing was named editor for Special Studies at the College. In 1957, he added the title

"dean of men" to his name, maintaining a half-time teaching course load. He served as dean of men until 1965 and was named associate professor of English in 1959. From 1968 through 1977, Bushing was the director of the Maryville College Summer School and in 1973, he helped others follow his example of lifelong learning by initiating the College's continuing education program. He served as director of that program until 1978.

Beginning in 1975 and continuing until 1978, Bushing served as acting chair of the Department of English. He served as coordinator for the Freshman Inquiry Program from 1979 until 1982 and in 1987 was named chair of the Department of Languages and Literature. From 1988 through 1993, he served as mace bearer, and from 1990 until 1993, was secretary of the faculty. During his tenure at Maryville College, he published four editions of the Manual of Outlining and Research.

In May 1991, at the time of his official retirement, Maryville College recognized Bushing's lifetime of service and devotion to Maryville College by bestowing him with an honorary doctorate. He continued to serve as an adjunct faculty member until 1996.

Retirement for Bushing has meant more time for pursuing outside interests, but in no way has weakened the bond he has with his alma mater, noting that he is frequently called upon to participate in special events at the college, and often to share the knowledge he has about its past.

Bushing is also a renowned expert about the life and World War I heroics of U.S. Army Sergeant Alvin C. York, whose wartime correspondence Bushing is currently editing. He gives lectures about York at local and regional venues and leads tours to York's home place in Fentress County, Tennessee. The Bushings have four children: A. Stuart Bushing, Barbera Bushing, Kathy Banfield, and Jennifer Hill. They also have seven grandchildren. In addition to their joint hobbies of hiking, camping, and gardening, the Bushings are active members of Highland Presbyterian Church.

"In word, deed, and action, Dr. Arthur Bushing has served Maryville College for more than five decades. His devotion is unceasing and his support untiring. He did far more than was asked of him and far more than could have been expected. If his pride in the College could be surpassed, it could only be surpassed by the pride we as members of the College community take in calling him one of our own," Gibson said during the presentation ceremony.

At the time he was notified of his selection as the recipient of the 2000 Maryville College Medallion, Bushing responded, "Since the first Maryville College Medallion was awarded, I have watched with admiration as each new recipient was recognized. Although I feel in nowise worthy of being so honored, I will accept with gratitude and humility. Maryville College has been one of the most important influences in my life. Not only did it train me for an academic career, but it was here I found my beloved helpmate, and then Maryville paid me to do what I love most—stand in the classroom and learn about life and human nature from literature and my students."

2000 Alumni Citation Awards

Dr. Sarah Brown McNiell

Dr. Sarah Brown McNiell came to Maryville College from Howard County, Maryland, in 1949. A fourth-generation Brown to attend MC, she majored in history. McNiell graduated cum laude in 1953 and completed her master's degree in American History at the University of Tennessee in 1955.

It was while working on her degree at UT that McNiell began her 40-year employment with MC.

Married in 1956 to Stuart P. McNiell, Jr. '50, McNiell sometimes worked part-time so that she could stay home with her children, Stuart III and Helen. Awarded the Danforth Graduate Fellowship for Women in the early 1970s, McNiell returned to UT to work on her doctoral degree in American History. Her dissertation, "The Theatre of Owen Fawcett: Half a Century of a Supporting Player, 1853-1903" was accepted in 1973.

In 1982, McNiell became director of continuing education at MC. A vacancy in the history department led her back to the classroom, and in 1995, she retired as chair of the history department.

Just as she was active on campus, McNiell has been an active citizen in Blount County and East Tennessee as a member of the Organization of American Historians, the East Tennessee Historical Association and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

A member, elder, church school teacher and assistant in archives at New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville, McNiell studied the church's history and hopes to publish "New Providence Presbyterian Church's Pew Account Book for 1827 to 1852" this fall.

A co-founder of the Blount County Historic Trust, McNiell has written several successful nominations for the National Register of Historic Places, including nominations for Maryville College's Historic District.

Today, McNiell is a frequent speaker and presenter on Blount County and NC history, appearing as a guest at service organization meetings, schools and college forums.

She and her husband live in Maryville.

Dr. Clyde H. Flanagan

Clyde H. Flanagan, Jr. majored in chemistry at Maryville College and graduated in 1962. He then studied medicine at the University of Tennessee at Memphis, adding "M.D." to his name in 1966.

Now a retired colonel in the U.S. Army Medical Corps, Flanagan began his 23-year service with the Corps in 1965. He found internships, residency, and fellowship training opportunities in the U.S. Army medical centers in Hawaii, Texas, and Washington, D.C.

Residency from 1969 to 1971 at Walter Reed General Hospital laid the groundwork for much of Flanagan's professional track: child and adolescent psychiatry. From 1971 to 1980 at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, he directed numerous child psychiatry programs, services and residents and also served as the child psychiatry consultant to the Child Protection Council in Washington, D.C.

Flanagan's teaching career began in 1974 when he was hired as a clinical assistant professor of psychiatry at Georgetown University School of Medicine. In 1977, he accepted a position as clinical associate professor of psychiatry for the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences in Bethesda, Maryland. In 1980, he joined the faculty of the Washington (D.C.) School of Psychiatry, where he led child psychotherapy training.

From 1980 to 1986, Flanagan served as chief of the DeWitt Army Community Hospital's Department of Psychiatry. Later, he moved to the Naval Hospital's Tri-Service Alcoholism Recovery Department, where he was an assistant head of the program, clinical team leader and director of the division of psychiatry.

In 1988, Flanagan joined the staff of the University of South Carolina School of Medicine, where he works today as the professor and director of the division of psychoanalysis, department of neuropsychiatry and behavioral science.

Flanagan's honors and public accolades are numerous. He was an honorable mention for the J. Franklin Robinson Award for work accomplished during child psychiatry residency training. In 1994, residents of the USC School of Medicine, Department of Neuropsychiatry and Behavior Sciences voted him "teacher of the year." He has been selected for inclusion in "Who's Who in the South and Southeast," "Who's Who in America," and "Who's Who in the World" and "Best Doctors in America."

Flanagan and his wife Carol have four children, Jay, Christopher, Patrick and Colleen. They live in Chapin, South Carolina.

Dr. James C. Fisher

Dr. James C. Fisher began his career at Maryville College in 1951, graduating in 1955 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English.

After graduation, Fisher furthered his education by receiving a Master of Divinity, a master of science in educational administration and supervision and a doctorate in urban education.

Fisher's professional life spans more than a quarter of a century in parish ministry and two decades in higher education, as well as many professional publications, presentations, and years of involvement in the communities in which he has lived.

Fisher's dedication to the community is reflected in his professional choice to be a pastor. Since 1955, Fisher's experience as a pastor has included working with inner-city and rural congregations as well as two suburban new church developments. As a pastor, Fisher spent much of his time devoted to adult education, which led him to a second career in higher education.

At the University of Wisconsin, Fisher completed master's and doctoral work in adult and continuing education with an emphasis on administrative leadership. Fisher's dedication to others has not been limited to his work as a pastor or educator. He has been very active in his service to the professional community, the university, and the community as a whole.

For his many achievements and concern for others, Fisher has been honored for his work by the Friends of the School of Education at the University of Wisconsin, the Milwaukee Council for Adult Learning, and the References and Adult Service Division of the American Library Association.

Fisher and his wife Barbara '56, have two children, Anne and David. They reside in Mequon, Wisconsin.

U.S. News & World Report Once Again Ranks Maryville Among the Best

It's official. Maryville College has once again been ranked among the best of the best in U.S. News and World Report's annual rankings of colleges and universities. For the sixth time out of the past seven years, Maryville College has been listed as one of the ten best liberal arts colleges in the South.

One of only two Tennessee institutions listed in the top 10 of the category, Maryville College ranked seventh and tied with Asbury College in Kentucky. Berea College of Kentucky ranked first.

"We are pleased to be recognized again by U.S. News and World Report," said Maryville College President Gerald W. Gibson. "High school students conducting college searches naturally turn to these rankings, as do their parents and guidance counselors. The U.S. News and World Report Guide is an excellent way for us to share our story with these potential students."

Maryville tied for seventh place in the rankings last year. While the methodology used to rank schools may vary from year to year, the same measures—academic reputation, retention, faculty resources, student selectivity, financial resources and alumni giving—continue to be benchmarks of a quality education, as decided by the magazine's advisory board.

In addition to its annual rankings, U.S. News and World Report also issues a special report about paying for college. In this report, schools are chosen for the "Best Values"

Category. This year, Maryville College ranked 9th among Southern liberal arts colleges in the category.

"The fact that Maryville has been on the list six of the last seven years affirms the academic quality of the college," said Gibson. "Making an excellent liberal arts education possible for students from all backgrounds and economic means has always been part of the mission of Maryville College, and being chosen as a Best Value is a great indicator that we're succeeding," he added.

Joe D. Eakes Chair of Business Established at Maryville College

On July 11, Maryville College President Gerald W. Gibson announced the establishment of the Joe D. Eakes Chair of Business and the Joe D. and Doris W. Eakes Scholarship Fund. Both the named professorship and the scholarship program will be funded through donations by Mrs. Eakes.

A native of Maryville, Mr. Eakes was an entrepreneur and investor who, along with his wife, shared a distinguished career which included the building of adult care facilities, restaurants, motels, and other commercial ventures. July 11 would have been Mr. Eakes' 64th birthday. He was married to Mrs. Eakes, for 36 years before his death in 1992, days before 56th birthday.

The professorship and the scholarships initially will be funded through annual contributions by Mrs. Eakes and later in the form of distribution from a charitable trust she has established. Maryville College is one of three major recipients of the trust. Valued at $4.2 million today, the trust is expected to grow significantly over the course of its lifespan. When the final distribution is made, Maryville College's portion of the trust has the potential to exceed $4 million. Cape Fear Community College in North Carolina is also a recipient. Mrs. Eakes was honored there in June when the college announced it would name its nursing program after her.

Friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Eakes, college board members, and local officials recognized Mrs. Eakes' generosity at a dinner on campus. It was also announced that Dr. Mary Kay Sullivan has been named the first Joe D. Eakes Professor of Business.

According to Mrs. Eakes, much of the last year for her has been spent in reflection about the many friends, business associates and family members who contributed to the couple's success. Upon reading a novel written by Catherine Ryan Hyde entitled Pay It Forward, Mrs. Eakes was inspired by the idea that the world could be changed for the better through acts of kindness. The book, which was the basis for a film released in October, promotes the idea of repaying kindness through kindness to others. Mrs. Eakes said she feels her generosity will motivate the students who are helped to help others.

"God so richly blessed us, and I wanted to remember Joe by doing something to help and inspire others in his hometown," Mrs. Eakes said. "I hope to encourage students helped through these scholarships to pay it forward through acts of kindness to others as opportunities present themselves."

During the ceremony, Mrs. Eakes presented copies of the book autographed by the author for the College library.

"Maryville College students have traditionally been dedicated to serving others and making their lives better," said Dr. Gibson. "We are delighted and grateful for Mrs. Eakes' acts of kindness. These gifts will support Maryville College and its students for untold generations."

Doris W. Eakes and Dr. Gerald Gibson celebrate the establishment of the Joe D. Eakes Chair of Business and the Joe D. and Doris W. Eakes Scholarship Fund.

A Home for the Holidays

This Christmas, a Maryville mother and her three children will celebrate the holiday in their new home, the first home they have ever called their own. The Drew family also had a pantry full of food with which to prepare a Christmas dinner and many more meals throughout the coming months. The new home is the first built by the Maryville College chapter of Habitat for Humanity.

Students began working on the home, located in the Eagleton Village area of Maryville, in September. Framing for the home was put into place on October 6 and 7 and students, faculty, and staff members from the College worked at the site every Tuesday, Thursday, and weekend throughout October and November. On Monday, October 30, members of the College community hosted a potluck dinner for the family, during which they were introduced to the team building their house. In a separate lunchtime event held on campus in November, faculty and staff members donated non-perishable food items to stock the Drews' shelves.

In addition to the labor, the College raised and contributed $4000 toward the effort. Funding for the new home has also come from the Tennessee Housing Development Agency and the Federal Home Loan Bank of Cincinnati.

Gossett Named to Good Works Team

Brian Gossett, a senior at Maryville College and offensive lineman on the Fighting Scots football squad, was recently named to the American Football Coaches Association's Good Works Team.

Gossett was one of only 22 college football players across the country (in NCAA Divisions I, II, III and NAIA) named to the AFCA's Good Works Team. He was recognized during halftime of the September 30 game against Millsaps College.

According to the AFCA, the Good Works Team "honors those athletes who show exceptional dedication to community service and to the betterment of the communities in which they live...Candidates had to display sincere concern and reliability, while also having made a favorable impression on the organizations with which they are involved."

While at Maryville College, Gossett has been involved in the intramural program, the Student Government Association, the Academic Life Council, the Planning and Budget Advisory Committee, Kappa Delta Pi, Omicron Delta Kappa and the Highland Echo. He was president of the Class of 2000.

Off campus, Gossett has volunteered for the Boy Scouts of America and has been employed as a teachers' assistant in Fort Craig Elementary's pre-school program.

Maryville College Head Coach Phil Wilks said, "Brian makes a great impression. People can see him off the field and say, 'Here's a football player who is intelligent, who is involved, and who is personable.' He wants to play and not just sit on the sidelines. And I'm not talking about football only; I'm talking about everything."

Gossett, who is the son of Kim and Cathy Gossett of Etowah, Tennessee, graduates from Maryville College in December.

MC Chemists Receive Award from the ACS

For the first time since 1981, Maryville College's student affiliate chapter of the American Chemical Society (ACS) has received an honorable mention award from the ACS.

The awards, which recognize affiliate chapters' activities and programs to promote the study of chemistry, were recently announced for the 1999-2000 school year. Award-winning chapters will be honored April 1, 2001 at the ACS national meeting in San Diego, Calif.

"It is an honor and great achievement for all the members of [MC's] ACS," said Valerie Malyvanh, a senior chemistry major and president of the campus affiliate chapter. "It came as a pleasant surprise. Last year was the first year in a long time that the MC chapter has been really active."

Almost 35 students belong to the College's affiliate chapter, Malyvanh said, adding that the membership has increased dramatically due to the programming and students' awareness of the opportunities and benefits of being an ACS student affiliate. Two faculty members serve as advisors for the group.

"Our goals for the local chapter at Maryville are to bring together students who share a common bond: Chemistry," the affiliate chapter president said, "to teach and encourage young children about chemistry through various outreach activities and to promote professional development and peer mentoring for all our students by having guest speakers and seminars pertaining to career choices and opportunities in chemistry."

To celebrate National Chemistry Week last year and introduce the public to the science, MC chemistry students conducted hands-on experiments in a local shopping mall.

Other programs included hosting guest speakers who work in the field of science, maintaining a useful bulletin board in Sutton Science Center and attending off-campus chemistry-related conferences and meetings.

Malyvanh said chapter members are inviting more speakers and planning more programs this year. In recognition of the National Chemistry Week's "Kitchen Chemistry" theme, members returned to the mall to conduct hands-on experiments and also visited a local elementary school to show children the science behind foods and cooking.

"One of our goals this year is to receive the outstanding chapter award," Malyvanh said. "That's not impossible."

Maryville College Welcomes Five New Faculty Members

At every gathering of Maryville College alumni, the topic of conversation almost inevitably turns to favorite faculty members and the impact they had on the lives of the Maryville graduates. That memories of beloved professors should dominate the dialogue should come as no surprise...one of Maryville College's greatest strengths has always been its faculty, whose members share a high level care and concern for their students, a dedication to the liberal arts, and a strong commitment to teaching.

At the beginning of the fall semester, five new members were welcomed into the ranks of Maryville's esteemed faculty, and already they are making great contributions to the College community.

Dr. Kristi A. Kneas joined the Division of Natural Sciences as assistant professor of chemistry, teaching Chemistry 117, Fundamentals of Chemistry, and Science 350, The Human Genome Project. Kneas received her doctoral degree from the University of Virginia Department of Chemistry in August of this year. She earned her bachelor's degree, also in chemistry, at Randolph-Macon Women's College in Lynchburg, Virginia, where she graduated magna cum laude. Kneas, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, has received numerous honors and research awards, including the Burger-Lutz Fellowship, the Randolph-Macon Women's College Founder's Scholarship and the American Chemical Society's James Lewis Howe Award. Her research has been published in several journals, including the Journal of Chemical Education, the Journal of Fluorescence, Analytical Chemistry, and Applied Spectroscopy.

Dr. Nancy L. Locklin is assistant professor of history in the Humanities Division, currently teaching Western Civilization and World Civilization. She earned her doctorate at Emory University in Atlanta in May. She completed her master's degree at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and her bachelor's degree at Hartwick College in Oneonta, New York. Locklin's dissertation is entitled "Women in Early Modern Birttany: Rethinking Work and Identity in a Traditional Economy," and she has given presentations at various conferences and meetings related to the role of women in pre-modern Europe. In 1998, she authored "Margaret Beaufort," "Lucrezia Borgia" and "Mary of Burgundy", which were included in Women in World History, published by Yorkin Publications in Waterford, Connecticut. From October 1998 to July 1999, Locklin conducted research funded by a Fulbright grant, in France.

Dr. Alesia Orren joined the Maryville College faculty in August as an assistant professor of Education. She had previously served the college as supervisor of student teachers and interim professor of education. Orren holds a doctorate of education in administration and supervision from the University of Virginia and a master of education in leadership studies from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She earned a bachelor's degree in family and child development from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. Orren has served as curriculum and evaluation specialist for the Tennessee School Boards Association and as assistant supervisor for student teachers at the Curry School of Education in Charlottesville, Virginia. She also taught for several years at elementary schools in Tennessee and North Carolina. Orren is a consultant for the Delaware School Boards Association and the South Carolina School Boards Association.

William Swann, instructor of Music in the Fine Arts Division, defended his dissertation for the D.A. in music theory pedagogy at the University of Mississippi earlier this year. The degree will be awarded in December. Swann, who holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Tennessee teaches music theory, aural skills, improvisation, jazz band, and general education courses. As a professional jazz pianist, he has performed for many years with the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, the Knoxville Symphony Pops Orchestra, Lew Tabakin, Percy Sledge, the Knoxville Jazz Orchestra, and many other groups and performers. He has also performed on several recordings, including The Lettermen's Christmas CD, "A Lettermen Christmas." He is also involved in community service, participating in the annual Jazz for Tots Concerts and in live jazz broadcasts for WUOT public radio. At the University of Mis-issippi, he was named Outstanding Student in Music Theory and was awarded the UM Jazz Scholarship. He is a member of Pi Kappa Lambda Music Honor Society and the College Music Society. In July 2001, he plans to perform at the Montreaux and North Sea jazz festivals in Europe.

Dr. Crystal L. Wright came to the Behavioral Sciences Division as an assistant professor of psychology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, where she received a doctorate in psychology. She is currently teaching Introductory Psychology, Research Methods, Social Psychology, and Perspectives on the Individual. Her thesis topic was "The Impact of Preparation on the Ingratiation Success of High and Low Self-Monitors." While at the university, she also completed a Graduate Program in Management Practice, as well as a certificate in College and University Teaching. Wright holds a master's degree in psychology from the University of California, Santa Barbara, and a bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of Richmond in Virginia. From 1995 to 1999, Wright was a National Science Foundation Graduate Fellow and in 1999 she received the Charles G. McClintock Graduate Fellowship in Social Psychology. Earlier this year, she was inducted into the Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society induction. Before coming to Maryville College, she served as an adjunct assistant professor at Ventura College in Ventura, California, and at Westmont College in Santa Barbara. Her research has been included in Advertising, Consumer Psychology and Health, which is being published by Lawrence Erlbaum Publishers, in the Blackwell Handbook in Social Psychology, which will be published in London next year, and in Psychological Science Laboratory, published in 1995 by McGraw-Hill. Wright serves as a consultant for the Mental Engineering television series based in St. Paul and is an associate team member for Consulting Services Network LLC in Santa Barbara.

Dr. Arda Walker, Beloved MC Faculty Member, Lives on in Hearts of Students and Colleagues

Dr. Arda Walker, beloved alumna, retired professor of history at Maryville College and coach of the College's much-revered debate team, passed away Sunday, June 25. She was 81.

Dr. Walker graduated from Maryville College in 1940 and joined its faculty in 1948. By 1963, she was chairing the history department, a position she held until her retirement in 1985. Her contributions to the College did not end in 1985, however. In the late 1980s and early 1990s, Dr. Walker teamed with fellow retired faculty member Dr. Carolyn Blair in penning "By Faith Endowed: The Story of Maryville College, 1819-1994."

Dr. Walker's awards, honors and public recognitions include "Outstanding Teacher of the Year" (1976), the Alumni Citation (1993) and the Maryville College Medallion (1995).

In a letter to Maryville College President Dr. Gerald W. Gibson, acknowledging her selection as a Medallion recipient, Dr. Walker wrote: "My long relation with the College for 76 years in one way or another has made it a large part of my life. The students with whom I've dealt so many years ago, certainly reinforce my conviction that I was right to give up a highly remunerative and influential job in Washington with prospects in the future to return to my alma mater and the greater rewards of teaching."

Martha Hess, alumna and current registrar at Maryville College, remembers Dr. Arda Walker as a demanding professor, but one who brought people and cultures to life in the classroom.

"She was demanding, but she didn't demand more of us than she demanded of herself," Hess said. "One of the things that I appreciated the most about her class was that she didn't just teach dates and facts; she gave you the point of view of the people you were learning about. Once you had that [point of view], you picked up all of the factual information."

Walker's classrooms were always filled with wall hangings or artwork from her travels abroad. This art, along with Walker's stories and pictures, were incorporated into lectures and discussions, Hess explained.

Walker was a life-long learner who supported and lived the mission of Maryville College, the registrar added.

"Dr. Walker truly believed in the mission of this College – that we are here to educate every student who walks through the doors, but also that we live life to the fullest and learn everyday, up until the day we die.

"She did that."

Dr. Art Bushing, former English professor and colleague of Dr. Walker's for more than 30 years, said she was an invaluable member of the faculty and made numerous contributions to the curriculum of the College and the College's standard of scholarship.

"Her colleagues had tremendous respect for her," Bushing said. "When she spoke, she spoke with authority. She was a very demanding teacher, very meticulous, and expected the very best of her students in terms of scholarship. What her students received was a tremendous background for research and graduate studies."

Bushing said he remembers Walker "team teaching" with Dr. Carolyn Blair, a professor of English and academic vice president and dean of the College. Combining history with English for courses that dealt with world history and world literature was "stimulating for students," he said, and one of the most successful cross-discipline curriculum offerings.

Walker and her parents were charter members of Highland Presbyterian Church, and Dr.

College Mourns Passing of Frances Massey

E. Frances Massey, former dean of women and Maryville College alumna (Class of 1934) passed away Aug. 26, 2000, at the Asbury Center in Johnson City, Tenn. She was 88.

A former resident of Asbury Acres in Maryville, Dean Massey had moved to Johnson City because of declining health.

Memorial services were held Aug. 28 at New Providence Presbyterian Church, where she was a member, and interment was held in the College Cemetery. Another memorial service was held Oct. 15, following a Homecoming weekend worship service in the College's Center for Campus Ministry.

Massey's 44-year career in education began in her native Alabama, where she taught high school. Accepting the newly created position of Dean of Women at Maryville College, she returned to the campus in 1947. Before she retired in 1977, she had a tremendous impact on the student life at Maryville College and on individual lives of its students. Coordinating extracurricular activities, developing a strong women's student government and promoting honor societies were just a few of her contributions.

"When Dean Massey accepted the job of Dean of Women in 1947, she joined a staff that was a full generation older than she," remembered Art Bushing '43, who served as Dean of Men from 1957 until 1965. "A significant contribution was the effective way in which she moved administrative views into the post-World War II era."

In notifying several former students and friends of Massey's death, Bushing said he received several messages that spoke to the former dean's fairness, cordiality, graciousness and sincerity.

Of his own recollections of Massey, Bushing said: "I admired the way in which she quietly and without fanfare helped women develop a strong student government program; she facilitated social activities that were suited to students' interests. Women felt comfortable coming in to discuss their problems as well as their plans. Throughout her 30 years of service to the College, she often mediated between students and faculty, students and administration."

Massey held a master's degree in educational administration from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville, and completed additional graduate work at Florida State University. She was a long-time member of the American Association of University Women, past president of the Tennessee Association of Women Deans and president of Delta Kappa Gamma.

Massey is survived by her sister, Mrs. Lucy Vaughan of Johnson City; two nephews and their spouses, four grandnieces and one grand nephew.

Memorial gifts may be made to MC's Lamar Memorial Library or New Providence Presbyterian Church.

MC Alumni Board Welcomes Five New Members

In September, the Maryville College Alumni Board celebrated a reunion of past members with a picnic at the House in the Woods. The Board had another reason to celebrate—the addition of five new members, who will serve as the Alumni Board's Class of 2003. During their three-year term, the new Board members will serve as a link between the College and its alumni and will offer guidance in their particular areas of expertise as members of Board committees.

Beverly Fox Atchley, Class of 1982, followed her Maryville College degree with graduate study at Bristol University, from which she received the master's degree in 1990. Atchley serves as Senior Vice President--Auditor for BankFirst in Knoxville. She is involved in numerous community organizations and activities and is a member of LaRetta Methodist Church. She and her husband, Jim, live in Knoxville.

After attending Maryville College as a member of the class of 1969, Sharon Pusey Bailey received the B.S.N. at the University of Tennessee Center for Health Sciences in Memphis and the M.S.N.

from the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

Bailey is vice chief of nursing at Blount Memorial Hospital in Maryville. An elder of New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville, Bailey has also been actively involved with the Tanasi Council of the Girl Scouts, the Blount County chapter of the American Cancer Society and the Diabetes Association.

Bailey, who lives in Maryville, was married to the late Dr. Joel Bailey. Their twin daughters both followed their mother's footsteps to Maryville College. Joy Bailey Hutson, who majored in mathematics, graduated in 1999. Carol Bailey, a Maryville College music major will graduate this spring.

A 1992 graduate, Carol Callaway-Lane earned the master of science in nursing from Vanderbilt University School of Nursing. Callaway-Lane is a bone marrow transplant nurse practitioner at the Vanderbilt Cancer Center in Nashville.

A member of the Middle Tennessee Advanced Practice Nursing Society, Callaway-Lane is also a volunteer for Habitat for Humanity. She also plays softball on Vanderbilt Medical Center team and on the Westminster Presbyterian Church Team. She belongs to Westminster, where she is a member of the church choir. She lives in Nashville with her husband, Joe C. Lane, Jr.

Daniel F. Osborne '76, lives in Gainesville, Georgia, where he is vice president of Regions Financial Corporation. A member of Lakewood Baptist Church, he is married to the former Pamela Patton '77. They have three children: Jared, Justin and Jennifer.

Dr. James N. Skeen '64 recently retired from his position as principal, Museum and Theatre Services in Decatur, Georgia. Skeen, who earned his master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Georgia, has also served as associate director of the Fernbank Science Center. Previous positions also include staff ecologist at the Fernbank Museum of Natural History and assistant professor of Mercer University in Atlanta. Skeen is married to the former Marianne Jefferson, a member of the class of 1966.

Kin Takahashi Week & Golden Scots Academy Planned for June

If you think you can't wait until Homecoming to get together with old friends and fellow alumni, you don't have to. In June, the College will welcome alumni of all ages back to campus for Kin Takahashi Week and the Golden Scots Academy. The two events are being held concurrently for the first time this year to give everyone an opportunity to participate in either or both events, while allowing them to get reacquainted with former classmates or perhaps meet for the first time graduates of classes before or after theirs.

Participants in Kin Takahashi Week will continue the annual tradition of volunteering their time and efforts to campus improvement projects. The Golden Scots Academy, designed for alumni who graduated fifty or more years ago, offers a curriculum of enriching subjects for those interested in lifelong learning.

For more information about Kin Takahashi Week or the Golden Scots Academy, contact Debbie Akins at 865-981-8197.

Asian Heights: A Venture to Tibet, Nepal, Ladakh and the Ganges

Maryville College alumni have an unusual opportunity to see the spectacular beauty of the Himalayas and the intriguing societies that have developed in those mountain lands. A special feature of this venture will be group meetings and lectures along the way that will assist participants in developing an enhanced appreciation of Eastern religions while traveling in the lands where both Hinduism and Buddhism began.

Beginning July 20 and ending August 11, the trip will leave Knoxville and fly across the Pacific to Chengdu, China via Hong Kong; proceed to Lhasa, Tibet, for a few days and then on to Kathmandu, Nepal. From there the flight will be to Delhi and continue to the beautiful Kulu Valley. The group will also travel through the Himalayas to Leh, capital of the Indian Province of Ladakh. This stop Sites such as the home of the Doli Lomo are among landmarks trip participants can expect to see.

on the Silk Road will be the most spectacular part of the trip. Finally, there will be an opportunity for reflection at a Hindu ashram on the banks of the Ganges. Persons who wish may break the homeward journey for a three-day extension in Hong Kong.

This will be more than a tourist trip: in each location an initial guided tour will show the main sights, and be followed with opportunities to meet with local people in more meaningful exchanges. Two or three times a week, brief lectures and discussions among the group will focus on the significance of what is being experienced.

Bring Your Memories to Life Maryville College Legacy Camp July 1-3, 2001

For years, you've been sharing your Maryville College memories with your children. Next summer, they can see for themselves what a special place it is, while learning everything they need to know as they begin the college search process.

The Office of Advancement and the Office of Alumni and Parent Relations invite all alumni and their high school students to the first MC Legacy Camp, to be held July 1-3, 2001. The camp is designed not only to introduce students to MC, but also to prepare them for the college admissions process, whether they plan to attend MC or another college or university.

The camp will include informative sessions about the admissions application, interviews, application essay writing, and financial aid and scholarships. Speakers will be recognized experts from colleges and universities throughout the country. Participants will also take part in a variety of recreational activities including Mountain Challenge ropes courses, hikes in the nearby Smoky Mountains, and other fun teen-oriented outings.

While the kids are learning all about college admissions and college life, you can take advantage of all the East Tennessee region has to offer, whether it's taking your own hikes in the mountains or shopping at the nearby outlet malls. A block of rooms has been reserved at MainStay Suites, located five minutes from campus. Special discounts are available.

Cost of the camp, open to all children and grandchildren of alumni, as well as younger brothers and sisters of current students, is

Kenneth Talbott '76 and his daughter Leslie, a member of the Class of 2003

$110. The fee includes all room, board, and activities, as well as a camp t-shirt. For more information, contact the Office of Admissions at 865-981-8092 or 1-800-59-SCOTS.

Maryville College Alumni, Students & Friends Invited to Explore South Africa

South Africans are famous for cultural diversity. Their complexities and contradictions and those of their environment are endless, as might be expected in a country that is home to more than a dozen cultural groups of African, European, and Asian origin. The prospect of learning about South Africans, their history, and their culture is a daunting one even for South Africans. One reason for this is rooted in the policies of apartheid, where groups of people were forcibly separated along racial lines, leaving many individuals with little or no idea about the religions, beliefs, culture, and history of their fellow citizens. Another reason is that some of the most interesting people often live in deep rural areas that are physically difficult to reach.

A tour, "From Mrs. Ples to Mr. Mandela: 31/2 Million Years of South African History and Culture," has been organized to provide MC students, alumni, and friends with a much deeper understanding of cultural and natural history, and hence a more rewarding educational experience, than other typical South African itineraries. Participants will engage in cultural outings to theatres, jazz clubs and community arts projects. Special social and political history tours will be led by ex-activists in both Cape Town and Soweto. Whenever possible, lodging has been arranged in guest houses and Bed and Breakfasts. The group will gather for periodic evening discussions to understand and analyze the past and the present as they unfold before the participants' eyes. Time will be built in for leisure opportunities and reading lists will be provided to tour groups members to enhance their experiences.

The 21-day tour will begin in May and will be led Dr. Chad Berry, who teaches South African history, and Dr. Frank van Aalst, who has extensive experience in organizing international tours. The arrangements are being organized by Dr. Thomas Wallmach of Geo Tours South Africa, with contributions from Dr. Greg Cuthbertson and Dr. Michael Titlestad, both of whom are specialists in cultural tourism from the University of South Africa. Dr. Cuthbertson will accompany the group on the trip.

Comprehensive cost of the trip will be in the neighborhood of $5,000 and will include international airfare from Knoxville and return, in-country transportation, all accommodations, at least two meals per day, admission fees, evening and cultural programs and English-speaking guides. The price does not include tips for guides, drivers, bellmen, room service, or any items not listed on the menu provided for the group; laundry; and other personal items. Passport fees, travel insurance, and any inoculations are the responsibility of each traveler. Antimalarial medication is recommended for the bush. MC students will receive experiential learning credit.

To reserve space for the trip, a $1500 deposit is required by February 1, 2001, with full payment due March 15. The tour is limited to 24 individuals. Checks should be made payable to Maryville College-South Africa and sent to Dr. Chad Berry, Division of Humanities, Maryville College, 502 E. Lamar Alexander Pkwy., Maryville, TN 37804.

Let's Take Our Hearts & Alums to San Francisco

Planning is underway for a Maryville College alumni trip to San Francisco April 26-29, 2001. Alumni from throughout the country are invited to join us for a weekend of touring, a special reception with Bay Area MC grads and getting caught up on happenings at MC.

For anyone wishing to depart from Knoxville, a special travel package has been arranged. For $1,000 per person double occupancy or $1,250 single occupancy, the following is provided: round trip Delta airfare, three nights at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel at Union Square, two dinners, a four-hour city tour, and a four-hour Muir Woods/Sausalito tour. Additional charges will be for hotel shuttle or taxi from the airport. Those making arrangements from other cities may receive a five percent discount from Delta when using a special code the airline has assigned. This code can be obtained by calling the Alumni Office.

For more information, please call the Alumni Office at 865-981-8197 or fill out the reservation card at the back of this issue. The deadline for reservations is January 26, 2001.

Celebrating the Maryville Spirit through Reunion Giving

If you didn't make it to Homecoming this year, you missed some great reunions and great celebrations. For the Classes of 1935, 1940, 1945, 1950, 1955, 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985, 1990, and 1995, Homecoming 2000 was one they will not quickly forget. The weather cooperated beautifully, the trees were in their splendorous colors, Bartlett Hall was dedicated, and of course the floats were out in full force at the Homecoming parade. This Homecoming was a special time to celebrate much of the College's success over the past several years. Thanks to the successful completion of the MC2000 campaign, there were visible signs all over campus that Maryville is on the move.

The tradition among reunion classes is to hold a special reunion gift campaign to honor their reunion class. This year was made even more special as two classes went beyond the traditional reunion appeal to make special gifts to the College.

The Class of 1950 decided some time ago to make a special gift to the College. So, with the help of the Advancement Office staff, they encouraged classmates to make a three-year commitment to MC. Their goal was to present Dr. Gibson with a check for $100,000 on the night of the Alumni Banquet. The Class of 1950 did that and more! Their perseverance and persistence paid off as they presented the College with a check for $140,490 with 63 percent participation! This amount includes all gifts and pledges made to Maryville College during their three-year campaign. Members of the Class of 1950 Reunion committee deserve special thanks for their hard work. They include: Henry Callaway, Class President; Duncan Bennett; Ellen Brahams; Peggy Campbell; Betty Cornett; Ann Crawford; Bo Henry; George McMahon; Stu McNiell; Vendeda Tulloch; Hilda Walker.

The Class of 1960 tried a different approach that has proven to be just as effective. Three classmates initiated a challenge to increase participation and support for the MC Annual Fund. Their challenge was to match dollar for dollar any increase in a gift whether the gift was made last fiscal year or you were a first time giver. Their efforts have paid off as over $26,000 has been raised. Thanks to Dan Greaser and Dan and Sondra Ellis for coordinating the efforts to publicize the challenge.

We want to thank all those alumni who celebrated their reunion year with a gift in support of the Annual Fund. To date, over $143,700 has been raised among all reunion classes. Currently, the Class of 1960 leads all classes in dollars raised and the Class of 1955 leads the participation ranks (see table for class totals). Remember, all gifts in support of the Annual Fund received by the end of the fiscal year will count in the class totals. Winning classes will be announced at Homecoming 2001 and will be recognized on plaques in Anderson Hall. If you need more information about making a reunion gift, please contact Helen Bruner, Director of Annual Giving at (865) 981-8202.

Calling All Alumni —

reached the 50 percent plateau — a mark fewer than five percent ever reach! Maryville has been close over the last several years and now it is time to succeed.

Many of you may have already received a phone call from one of our Phonathon callers or will receive one soon. Others will be contacted through the mail. Regardless, please give Maryville serious consideration. Your gift can be designated in any number of ways, and please know that it makes an impact not only on the students here at Maryville, but even in the rankings of U.S. News and World Report.

MC has had much to celebrate recently such as the dedication of new or renovated buildings, increased enrollment and deserved recognition. Just as exciting is the continued increase in alumni giving (see table). Several years ago, the National Alumni Board set a goal of 50 percent participation among our alumni. Steady progress has been seen over the years, but the 50 percent mark has proven elusive.

Maryville has been consistently recognized as a top ten school in the Southern Regional Liberal Arts category by U. S. News and World Report. Many factors, like alumni participation, are considered when making these selections. Based on all schools in the Southern category, Maryville ranks fourth out of all schools in alumni participation! It's obvious that such a high ranking in alumni giving helps us maintain our prominence in the top ten category.

At 46.1% Maryville has never had greater support from alumni. But please, don't stop now! Attaining 50 percent would increase our ranking among the Southern Regional Liberal Arts schools, but it would also help us reach national prominence as a school that has

A Call for Maryville College Memorabilia

Do you have Maryville College memorabilia that you would like others to enjoy?

... Maybe a letter sweater that someone has outgrown, a class ring that shrunk (!!!) since graduation, or photographs of MC students that really depict the changing times, fashions and rules at Maryville College?

If you do, and if you're willing to donate it, we at the College have a place for it! With the restoration and expansion of Bartlett Hall, Maryville College now has a beautiful new student center, but we're calling on alumni and friends of the College to help give it some character. Specifically, we hope to decorate Isaac's (the new student cafe) so that students, faculty, staff and others who frequent the cafe can be reminded of the long and proud history that is Maryville College.

Undoubtedly, you have seen antiques and localized memorabilia on display in restaurants. We hope to do the same in Isaac's, only with a lot of orange and garnet and a lot of "MC" stuff.

Letter sweaters, class rings, athletic programs, choir robes, football jerseys, candid photos, old pennants, music programs, honor society pins, tennis rackets, etc. We are looking mainly for items that will lie flat, but we will consider anything with an interesting story to tell.

Items chosen for display will be put in shadowbox frames and security mounted. Unfortunately, we can't promise that everything donated will be used, and because of limited staff and resources dedicated to this project, we cannot return items not chosen for display in Bartlett Hall. Donations of memorabilia and antiques may be sent to other appropriate departments, however, to use as they see fit.

We are asking that donations be sent to Libby Welsh/Maryville College/502 E. Lamar Alexander Pky./Maryville, TN 37804. Be sure to include donors' names, addresses and any relevant information (i.e. dates, usage, importance, etc.) that could be posted next to the item, if chosen for display.

If you have any questions, feel free to e-mail Karen Beaty (beaty@maryvillecollege.edu) in the Public Relations office.

Arda Walker was later elected an elder. Bushing, another long-time member of Highland, added that she was a driving force there, too, serving on numerous boards and committees and teaching Sunday School.

Bushing said Walker's interest in traveling, flowers, art and needlework demonstrates her love for learning and love for life.

In a visit with her not long before her death, Bushing talked with Dr. Walker about the improvements taking place on campus, namely the construction and restoration of Bartlett Hall. Though not in good health, she told him she would like to see the building.

"Even then," he said, "she still had an interest in the College."

Dr. Sarah McNiell, who was a student of Dr. Walker's in the early 1950s and joined her in the history department in the 1980s, remembers her former professor and colleague as a creative, versatile and a very generous person.

"[Dr. Walker] prepared extensively every night," McNiell said. "She was interested in all aspects of history – political, yes, but also art and culture."

A hallmark of Walker's exams in English history was one obscure question dealing with the material being covered. While the bulk of the test dealt with facts and dates, McNiell said students were especially challenged with this one question. Walker knew how to draw out the competitive instincts in her students, McNiell added.

"It was a very high honor to receive the highest grade in Dr. Walker's class," she explained. "With this obscure question, students really became competitive."

"At their 25-year reunions, you'll even hear them talk about these questions."

McNiell eventually became the chair of the history department, which meant going through some of Dr. Walker's files.

"I was amazed at all of the work she had done for the College," McNiell said. "She had done the research for the College's career planning and placement office, the non-Western studies program...she had even gone to UT-Chattanooga to take some Asian history courses. "She didn't teach Asian history, but researched it so that she could develop the program."

"By Faith Endowed: The Story of Maryville College 1819-1994" has been read (and is currently used as a resource) by hundreds of Maryville College faculty, staff, alumni and students. Not as well known is Walker's history of the February Meeting speakers.

McNiell said she and others were critical of the authoress' brief mention of herself in "By Faith Endowed." McNiell argued – against her former teacher and colleague – that modesty would compromise the true historical record.

"But she didn't want to mention herself too much," McNiell said, "and she usually got what she wanted."

Dr. Frank van Aalst, who has taught World Religions and World Culture courses on both India and China at Maryville College, will lead the trip. He lived for eight years in India and has traveled extensively in China. In the past five years, he has led five ventures to Asia for Maryville students, alumni, and friends. This will be the second trip to the Himalay region.

This trip is endorsed by the Maryville College Alumni Office. It is sponsored by the World Education Resource with assistance from Travel Concepts of Knoxville and is designed especially for Alumni and Friends of Maryville College.

The comprehensive cost of the trip will be $5250 (at current airfare prices) and will cover all travel, lodging, breakfasts, dinners, and most lunches. A deposit of $500 will reserve a place in the group and must be received no later than March 1, 2001. Full payment is due on May 1, 2001.

LETTER FROM THE ALUMNI PRESIDENT

It won't come as any big surprise to my friends and classmates from Maryville College when I say that I wasn't the most "academic" person in college. At the risk of the varied interpretations, I'll say that I enjoyed myself very much at Maryville. I played football. I greatly improved my golf game on the hills and "fairways" of the college campus. I socialized on the steps of Pearsons Hall every evening after dinner. I enjoyed late-night card games with my roommates in Carnegie.

But looking back, I realize that I also changed for the better at Maryville.

And I realize today that the change is due largely to the liberal arts education I received.

I majored in business and while I daily use the information that I learned in my social science classes in Thaw Hall, the courses in Anderson and Sutton Science Center and the Fine Arts Center have equally made a difference in my life. Every bit of that curriculum molded me into the person I am today.

First of all, I think I received a great education. I was taught by some of the best professors anywhere, and the curriculum was balanced. From my English and literature classes, I learned how to write and read critically. I was challenged to participate in discussions on world events, and I learned to research and gather information throughout my Independent Study project.

Today, I'm a senior vice president at SunTrust Bank. From experience, I know that my job isn't all about figures or percentages; I don't just add up columns all day long or figure finance rates. Banks – good banks, anyway – take customers seriously, and communication with them is important, whether that communication takes the form of a letter, a presentation or a marketing campaign. Because of the general education courses I took at Maryville College, I think I am more comfortable with (and therefore, better at) the entire business of banking.

From what I've observed in the hiring process of SunTrust, bankers tend to fill vacant positions with graduates who have focused their educations in finance or accounting. Certainly, I'm not saying these people are unqualified for the world of banking. They are qualified. But I do think the liberal arts graduate approaches work and life from a different perspective, and I think these graduates are invaluable assets to the workplace. I think liberal arts graduates are qualified to do almost anything.

The liberal arts curriculum has changed my life in two other ways. If English literature or natural science were not required for graduation back in the late 1970s, I'm almost certain I wouldn't have taken those courses. And not only would I have missed out on the sheer lessons of the subjects, I would have also missed out on the opportunities to hear professors like Dr. Art Bushing '43 and Dr. Bob Ramger '56. During the Interim period between Thanksgiving and Christmas, I remember learning to build a log cabin with Dr. Robert

Bonham. All of those professors were really neat, and it was so interesting to see the world through their eyes, if only for a semester or two.

Just as the liberal arts curriculum gave me the opportunity to learn under different professors, it also put me in an environment of diversity. In a Western Civilization class, I probably sat between art majors and chemistry majors. Hearing the perspectives and experiences of students very different from me just added to my own education.

Today, I'm the father of an 8-year-old girl. She's smart, funny and wildly imaginative. Ten years from now, I'd love to see her choose a small school like Maryville, so that she can receive the personal attention that, I believe, enriches the learning experience. And I certainly wouldn't discourage her from pursuing a liberal arts degree, because I think that kind of experience would challenge her and supplement the tools that my wife and I are giving her now for a full and meaningful life.

If 25 years from now my daughter looked back on her four undergraduate years and said that she enjoyed herself at college, how could I not be pleased? It certainly worked for me.
